While most teenagers look forward to relaxing, sleeping in, or gaming all summer, this incredible young man chose a completely different path. A movement sparked by the memory of a friend, a group of sixth-grade boys walked in without parents, buzzing with excitement and proudly ordering 40 wings and sodas they'd saved for.

At 13 years old, Gavin Mabes and his friends had a plan. They'd been saving up for weeks, and when the day came, they were ready to make a statement.

The group, known as the "Kindness Project," had a mission: to bring joy to a local community center that had recently lost a beloved member.

When 13-year-old Gavin Mabes and some friends went to a skate park, nobody was there except Carter Bruynell, who was a regular. They'd heard he was a good skater, and they wanted to see him in action. But when they got there, they found out he was a good person too. He was a good friend to everyone, and he was a good person to be around. When they saw him, they were all excited to see him. He was a good person to be around, and he was a good friend to everyone.
